Leaversworth, July 27, 1862.

More reliable advices from the South state that our forces found Fort Gibson abandoned by the Rebels. A reconneissance showed them to be posted, 5,000 strong, under Gen. Cooper, on the south bank of the Arkansas, at the mouth of Grand River.

Their force is composed of 500 Arkansians, and 1,000 Texans, with ten batteries of artillery, the remainder being Indians, mostly Chockatos and Creeks.

The route from Fort Scott to For Gibson is entirely free from Rebels, they having retreated across the Arkansas when our troops advanced.

The increasing annual products of agriculture in our country, and the hay and grain crops in particular, furnish striking illustrations of the close interdependence and connection of all branches of the national industry. The dependence of agriculture upon the results of mechanical skill, as well as the astoniahing progress of the latter within the last half century, is strongly exemplified in the application of labor-saving appliances, which become still more valuable, in emergencies like the present, in all the opeuable, in emergencies like the present, in all the operations of the farm.
